Q.1 (A) Read the following extract and answer the questions given below . (11)

Everyone looked down ashamed at their behavior. Only the young man who was the first to cross the stream after leaving his sack behind seemed to be unconcerned. Chandan spotted his cheerful face in the crowd and beckoned him forward. Then he asked, "Tell me, are you not sad you had to leave behind so much of wealth that suddenly came your way"?

The man said, "I didn't pick the jewelled fruits and flowers. I had picked some of the lovely, tasty fruits and had eaten my fill of them. In my sack I had kept some others for my little daughter who is at home. I had thought she would enjoy these tasty apples and mangoes. But when I saw there was no other way to go across the stream, I did not think twice about leaving my sack by the river. My little girl can get tasty fruits from some other garden too ! But I am so happy the king let us all wander around his garden, looking at the trees and plants and animals. He is a great king for having created this place of beauty, and it was a pleasure walking around there."

Finally a smile appeared on King Amrit's face. Chandan turned to him and said, "Your Majesty, I hope you now realize that people's contentment does not end with having enough food or money. They also need to be truly happy inside. Only then will they not be swayed when they gain or lose wealth. That is a lesson that everyone- whether a king or a commoner- needs to remember".

The king nodded, as did his subjects.

Questions :

Q.3 (A) Read the following extract and rewrite it from the point of view of Herman. (4)

My brothers and I were transported in a cattle car to Germany.

We arrived at the Buchenwald concentration camp one night weeks later and were led into a crowded barrack. The next day, we were issued uniforms and identification number.

“Don’t call me Herman anymore.” I said to my brother. “Call me 94983.”

I was put to work in the camp’s crematorium, loading the dead into a hand- cranked elevator.

I, too, felt dead. Hardened, I had become a number.

Soon my brothers and I were sent to Schlieben, one of Buchenwald’s sub- camps near Berlin.

One morning I thought I heard my mother’s voice.

“Son,” she said softly but clearly, “ I am going to send you an angel.”

Then I woke up. Just a dream. A beautiful dream.

But in this place there could be no angles. There was only work. And hunger. And fear.

A couple of days later, I was walking around the camp, around the barracks, near the barbed - wire fence where the guards could not easily see. I was alone.

On the other side of the fence, I spotted someone :a little girl with light, almost luminous curls. She was half hidden behind a birch tree.

I glanced around to make sure no one saw me. I called to her softly in German, "Do you have something to eat ?"

She didn't understand.

I inched closer to the fence and repeated the question in Polish. She stepped forward. I was thin and gaunt, with rags wrapped around my feet, but the girl looked unafraid. In her eyes, I saw life.

She pulled an apple from her woolen jacket and threw it over the fence.

I grabbed the fruit and, as I started to run away, I heard her say faintly, "I'll see you tomorrow."

I returned to the same spot by the fence at the same time every day. She was always there with something for me to eat- a hunk of bread or , better yet, an apple.
